

Ramesh Navaladi is Director Operations at the Council on Energy Environment and Water (CEEW). A veteran administrator, Ramesh leads finance, grants, general administration, human resources, and procurement efforts at The Council. He is instrumental in executing the short and long-term vision of the organisation.

Ramesh brings 30 years of experience in leadership, management and operations to The Council, having led several projects and programs at national and international organisations, and across sectors. He has worked for both governments, and non-governmental organisations and think tanks.

Before taking on Operations at The Council, Ramesh spent 21 years at USAID as Senior Project Development Specialist, and approximately five years at the United Nations Development Programme. He has been trained in program development, program operations, implementation, monitoring, and close out.

Ramesh has served in the United States, Iraq, India, Yemen and several South Asian countries. He is certified by the US government in Project Management and from the Manitoba Institute of Management in Non-Profit Management. Ramesh holds Masters in Business Administration from Madras University.